Hi, I'm Jack and I'm an assistant manager in our ESG team based out of our London office. ESG stands for environmental, social and governance.

Now I'm a geographer by background and I've always been interested in the relationship between the environment and society. I joined the firm on the Management Consulting Grad Scheme and moved into the ESG team earlier this year. My team is responsible for delivering the ESG business across the firm. So this involves supporting our client leasing teams go to market. It's about upskilling all of our colleagues so they understand what she means to us as a business, and it's generally about embedding ESG and everything that we do as an organization. We also work with clients C-suite teams on helping them to understand what she means for their sectors and their organizations as well.

So why KPMG? For me, ESG and sustainability are going to be the defining trends of our generation. I think as COP26 has shown, we're not going to achieve some of our global ambitions. And as we pivot the private sector to support them at KPMG, you get to have a voice at the table and we work with some of the largest organizations in the world. This means that you get to implement stakeholders and you get to drive change at scale. My team laugh and joke that this feels like geographers are finally getting their time in the limelight.

We're the first generation who really understands our impact on the planet and is both hopping and taking seriously the conversations around it. We need to deliver an economy and a planet which future generations are going to thank us for and being part of that goal in my days, they work at KPMG. This is certainly something that has a lot of meaning for me.
