In-depth Guide

Tax & Law – KPMG Law

As a KPMG Law trainee, you'll rotate into a number of legal specialisms over your 27-month training contract. This will include areas such as Disputes where we have a market leading tax litigation practice. In Corporate Deals & Structuring, you could find yourself collaborating with our clients to structure and implement business or group change, or be involved in an M&A transaction. Or within Family Office and Private Client Legal, helping our high net worth clients to manage their private affairs. Our Commercial, Technology and Data team are dealing with the cutting edge of change in business as they face into the issues that come with the new digital revolution. And in Workforce Solutions you could be helping to provide legal solutions to support our clients' workforce such as immigration and employment law - you'll work with resourcing experts and technologies to combine strategic business insight with practical legal advice. Or turn your hand to Legal Operations Transformation and Managed Legal Services, where we help teams of in-house lawyers improve the way they serve their organisations.

Careers in KPMG Law

The remit of KPMG Law is broad – and it's global. The legal expertise we provide is robust and reflective of our commitment to delivering the best outcomes for our clients. Our ability to see things from our clients' perspectives means we don't just focus on the small details; we also look at the bigger commercial picture. The work you do here will be varied. With responsibility from day one, your first rotation could see you working on a compliance project, or you might be advising on a situation that's arisen because of a macro-economic or regulatory issue, such as a transaction or contentious matter. It could be that you're using your skills to help organisations transform by employing new technologies or rethinking how they operate. It's all about helping clients to achieve their business outcomes.
